My Dear Sir/

I herewith return you the proof with my corrections, and I feel regret that you should have had the trouble of writing to me for it: I trust however will those answers fully plead my excuse for the delay.

With regard to "extra copies of the paper for circulation amongst my friends, I know not how many (if any) are allowed me by the Society; nor can I at present say, to whom I should wish to give copies, except that it is my intention to distribute them somewhat freely amongst the Members of both Houses of Parliament

On former similar occasions the matter was arranged between the printer and myself; and if it met your approval I think it would save trouble, if it were adopted in the present instance.

Yours My Dear Sir
Very faithfully

Sir Joseph trusts that although from the latter of the subject his reply has received a further length than he had wished — yet that from the great importance of the subject, he will be permitted to appear in the Letter Number of the Athenæum —

DEATH OF SIR JAMES SOUTH.—We have to announce the death of Sir James South, F.R.S., at an advanced age. He was the son of a dispensing druggist who towards the close of the last century carried on business in Blackman-street, Borough ; but James South entered upon a higher branch of the medical profession, and became a member of the Royal College of Surgeons. For some years he practised his profession in Southwark, and in the intervals of business pursued the study of astromony, in connexion with which he made some extremely valuable observations. In 1822 and 1823, in conjunction with Sir John Herschel, he compiled a catalogue of 380 double stars. After this he removed to Campden-hill, Kensington, where he constructed an observatory, to which he devoted the closest attention during the remainder of his life, and which has achieved an European fame. He was one of the founders of the Royal Astronomical Society, and was for a time its president. In 1830, on the recommendation of the Duke of Wellington, who was then Prime Minister, he received the honour of knighthood, and for several years past he has enjoyed a pension of 300*l.* a year on the Civil List for his contributions to astronomical science. The account of Sir James South's astronomical observations during his residence in Southwark is published in the Philosophical Transactions for 1825, and is accompanied by an interesting description of the five-foot and seven-foot equatorials with which they were made. One of these instruments is still mounted and in excellent condition at the Campden-hill Observatory. There are also in the observatory a seven-foot transit instrument and a four-foot transit circle, the latter celebrated as having formerly belonged to Mr. Groombridge, and as having been the instrument with which the observations were made for the formation of the catalogue of circumpolar stars which bears his name. Sir James South was born in 1785. Oct. 67.

eight months from the commencement of ... rate of 8 per centum per annum was declared, and 33,300 dollars ... ried to reserve fund.

The Second Report, covering the period of six months up ... ch of June, 1866, declared a dividend at the rate of 8 per centum per ... num. and the reserve fund was increased to 100,000 dollars.

The Third Report for the following six months declared a dividend ... at the rate of 12 per centum per annum, and increased the reserve ... fund to 175,000 dollars.

The last (Fourth) Report, covering the six months up to the 30th of ... June last, declared again a dividend of 6 per centum for the half ... year (or 12 per centum per annum), and, by carrying 75,000 dollars to ... the reserve fund, this was increased to 250,000 dollars.

These reports can be inspected at the London offices.

The centre of the operations of the Corporation being in China, it ... business is conducted under the direction and constant supervision of ... the Chairman, Deputy Chairman, and the Court of Directors at Hongkong, in addition to which there is a thorough and searching audit for ... each half-yearly meeting, conducted by two gentlemen selected by the ... shareholders themselves for their known efficiency, and entirely independent of all control by the Directors.

The equivalent in sterling of a "paid-up" share of the Company's ... capital at the fixed par of 4s. 6d. per dollar is £28 2s. 6d., and the ... equivalent of the paid-up amount on the "new" shares is £5 12s. 6d.

Until further notice there will not be more than 5,000 "paid-up," and ... 5,000 "new" shares allowed to be placed on the London register, and ... shares once placed on the London register will not be transferable to ... the Hongkong register.

It being the repeatedly expressed wish of a very large and influential ... body of shareholders, resident not only in China and the East, but also ... in the United Kingdom and Europe generally, that a London register ... of shares should be established, in order that sales and transfers of ... shares can be effected and perfected in London in as inviolable a manner in all respects as heretofore in Hongkong, the Directors have complied with the wishes so expressed, and a London register has now been opened, and shares transferred. The Directors, upon such an important step being taken, have deemed it expedient to lay before the public in Europe this short summary of the constitution and position of the Corporation, in order that matters hitherto known only to shareholders may be made generally public, and the manager at the London offices will afford the fullest and most detailed information upon all matters connected with the Bank.

Under the provisions of the Deed of Settlement the Directors have ... about 2,000 "new" shares of 125 dollars each, on which 25 dollars have ... been paid up.

... shares will be offered at par, or £5 12s. 6d. per share, and the Marienburg: October 8th 1832 £3/3/-.

Written on his way to Berlin. During the journey he became ill with enteritis and believed that he was dying. In this letter he leaves his wife and his sister to his friend's care and gives him instructions as to the disposal of his possessions. He refers to a clock which the King of Denmark had given for his observatory, and he wished his wife to dispose of his instruments.
